

Dear To whom it may concern,

This cover is in regard to my interest in applying for the frontend developer intern role recently posted on Twitter. With my skill-set and competencies, I am more than able to build, design, develop world-class websites and also provide unique solutions.

My name is Ogunleye Fawaz; I am currently studying telecommunication science in the University of Ilorin. Whilst studying there, I worked based on contracts for small businesses where I gained valuable knowledge and insight on how to manage business on the web. This combination of working whilst studying has given me both the theoretical and practical knowledge needed to hit the ground running in any future position I take up. I now have a wide breadth of experience of the type that gives potential employers the flexibility to place me in a broad range of demanding situations, with the confidence that I will undertake my duties professionally and effectively.

As the position with you is predominantly in the tech, I am confident that I can make a substantial contribution to this project at hand. I work well under pressure and carry out tasks in a thorough, precise manner. Some of the key strengths I can offer you include:

- Excellent communication skills
- Identifying and implementing strategies to meet objectives.
- Amazing Designing Skills
- Fully computer literate with critical coding skills, extensive software knowledge and proficiency covering variety of applications.
- Drive and determination to exceed set targets and identify opportunities.
- Fast learning skill.
- Developing superb judgement, diplomacy and tact when dealing with all customers.

While it is early in my tech career, you will find that I exhibit a powerful combination of proven ability, expertise, good communication skills, and extensive hands-on experience.

I anticipate and dearly look forward to your reply.

Yours faithfully,

Ogunleye Fawaz.
